threatening breakthrough area by back and forth.

Associated Press Correspondent Tom Lambert in Taejeon, advance U. S. headquarters 93 miles south of Seoul, said if the Reds maintain the speed of their advance they may run up against the Americans today.

The latest breakthrough by two mechanized columns was launched from the Yongpung area on the southwestern edge of Seoul. Earlier reports from Taejeon said other columns had pushed south from positions east of Seoul.

Moving southward, these columns outflanked Suwon, with its air field 10 miles south of Seoul. A U. S. spokesman at Taejeon called this development serious.

Both columns were brought under attack by U. S. warplanes just before dawn Sunday. One pilot said one of these eastern columns had 12 tanks and the other column had a number of trucks.

The tanks were on the west side of the Han River, over a crossing which had been blown by the South Koreans. A bridge, also, had been blown across the Han.

Reds Lose 7 Tanks, 22 Trucks

Taejeon, Tuesday, July 4 — (AP) — American and Australian fighter planes wrecked seven North Korean tanks and 22 trucks and shot down two hostile planes Monday, headquarters announced today.

Stung by the air attacks, the Communist invaders of South Korea are increasing their anti-aircraft positions in the Seoul area, said the communiqué issued by General MacArthur's headquarters.

It said North Korean bombing attacks had failed to dislodge the South Koreans who still were hanging onto Suwon, 23 miles south of Seoul.

The North Koreans were said, however, to be building up bases and supplies to support a renewed drive southward from the Han River, which flows west just south of Seoul.

An ammunition dump was blown up at an undisclosed place, a locomotive was destroyed and three enemy trucks and five tanks also were listed as damaged.

One American B-26 attack bomber was forced down at sea in the day's operations, while three F-80 jet fighters were lightly damaged by ground fire.

Missing Warren Man Once Trained Russian Girls

Warren, July 3 — (UP) — An Arkansas lieutenant who is missing in action in the Korean war was once trained Russian girls in Moscow to help operate an American radio station in the Soviet capital.

Mrs. Selig M. Selig of Warren has received notification that her son, Lieut. Louis G. Selig, Jr., 28, is missing following failure of an American plane to reach its destination.

Mrs. Selig said her son helped to install the huge American radio station in Moscow shortly after the end of World War II.

"He even helped to train Russian girls who took part in the operation of the station," Mrs. Selig said. The Arkansas was stationed for six months across the street from the Kremlin while in Moscow.

Mrs. Selig would make little comment on Russian cold war activities.

"They may be holding my son a prisoner," she said, "but from Moscow, Selig said her son did refer to 'the way people have to cater to the rulers over there.'"

Lieut. Selig entered the army in 1940 and served in Iran and Iraq during World War II. Shortly before receiving his new assignment in Japan, he was stationed at the Pentagon building in Washington. His wife and two children are in Japan.

Hickie to Head University Department

Fayetteville, July 3 — (AP) — Dr. Dale A. Hickie, a member of the agronomy department of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture since September, 1948, became head of the department July 1, Dean Lippert S. Ellis said today.

Dr. Hickie had been serving as acting head of the department since Dr. W. H. Garman resigned on May 31, 1949, to join the United States department of agriculture.

A native of Oklahoma, Dr. Hickie received his B. S. and M. S. degrees from Oklahoma A. & M. College. He spent a year at the University of Arizona on a graduate fellowship and served as assistant professor of agronomy and assistant agronomist at New Mexico A. & M. College from 1936 until 1943.

For three years he served in the naval air corps, doing radar research. In 1947 he went to the University of Massachusetts on a fellowship and in August, 1949, he received his Ph. D. degree from that institution.

Permanent Atom Commission Chairman Asked

Washington, July 3 — (AP) — Two Republican senators demanded today that President Truman name a new permanent chairman for the atomic energy commission at once.

The senators were Hickenlooper (Iowa) and Bricker (Ohio).

The atomic post was thrown open when David E. Lilienthal resigned last February 15. Since then, Mr. Truman has named two temporary chairmen — Sumner T. Pike, who left last Friday when his reappointment for a new four-year term hit a senate snag, and Gordon Dean, who now holds the job.

Hickenlooper, ranking Republican member of the senate-house atomic energy committee, told a reporter that a commission chairman should have been named "long ago." He noted that Lilienthal announced last fall that he intended to quit, and added:

"I think it is a mistake to let the job of the commission chairman be a temporary one."

Import Controls Continued by Agriculture Dept.

Washington, July 3 — (AP) — The agriculture department today continued controls of imports of fats, vegetable oils, rice and rice products to protect its producer price support programs.

The controls—first set up during the war to help ration world supplies among the U. S. and its allies—were to have ended June 30. But legislation authorizing their continuation was passed by congress and signed by President Truman last Friday.

The department issued an order extending them indefinitely. Under the order, imports can not be brought in without a government permit. In the case of most of affected commodities, domestic supplies are large and prices are at or below producer price support levels.

Court Considers Negro's Plea to Be on Ballot

Little Rock, July 3 — (AP) — A Negro's plea for a place on Little Rock's city Democratic primary ballot was taken under advisement by federal judge Thomas C. Trimble today.

A decision will be handed down later, probably Thursday.

The Rev. J. H. Gaudin, Negro, is seeking to run for the Democratic nomination as an alderman.

The Pulaski county Democratic central committee refused to place his name on the ballot.

The state Democratic committee said party rules prohibit a group from being candidates and that only the party's state convention

Osborn-Hazzard
Rehearsal Dinner

Held Saturday
Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Osborn entertained at their home at 7:30 p. m. Saturday evening with a rehearsal dinner for the members of the Osborn-Hazzard wedding party. The Osborn home was attractive with many arrangements of summer flowers.

The dining table was covered with a white damask cloth and dinner was served buffet style to the following guests: the bride and bridegroom-elect, Mrs. B. C. Hyatt, Miss Norma Jean Archer, Rev. Dale F. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. William Hughes, Miss Martha Helen Burns, Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Hazzard, Lawrence, Ronald Ritchie, Sammy Segnar, Billy Mitchell, John Honea, James Osborn Martha Ann Osborn and the hosts.

Frances Jane Osborn Becomes Bride of
James William Hazzard

The First Baptist church was the scene at 4 p. m. Sunday, July 2, of the marriage of Miss Frances Jane Osborn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Kimp Osborn, to James William Hazzard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bynum Medford Hazzard, of this city.

The couple exchanged vows before an altar decorated with white floor baskets of gladioli, Marconi daisies and white double stock against a background of standards of woodwardia. The central arrangement was a large plaque of marconi daisies, woodwardia and double white stock interspersed with white tapers placed on the Baptistry which was decorated with huckleberry. Trought iron candelabra to complete the wedding picture.

The Reverend Dale F. Taylor of Smackover read the impressive double ring ceremony assisted by the Reverend S. A. Whillow, pastor of the church.

A program of nuptial music was played by Mrs. B. C. Hyatt, organist, and included "Medley of Music," "O Promise Me," "Ave Maria," and "Moonlight Sonata." Mrs. Hyatt accompanied Miss Norma Jean Archer who sang "Because," and "I Love You Truly." The couple knelt on a white prie dieu while Miss Archer sang "The Lord's Prayer" for the nuptial blessing.

Miss Martha Ann Osborn, sister of the bride, and Ronald Richards, cousin of the bride, lighted the tapers to the strains of "Evening Star."

Miss Osborn was gowned in yellow taffeta with a scalloped collar, and a full circular skirt from the basque waist. She wore a garland of daisies on her hair. Ronald Richards wore a beige linen suit.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a dress of imported French lace over white taffeta, fashioned with a round neckline, bright pointed sleeves, and a basque waist with a full ballerina length skirt. She wore mits of matching lace, and white linen opera pumps.

Her fingertip veil of French silk illusion was attached to a lace bandeau with tiny white satin bows on each side. Her only ornament was a three strand pearl necklace, gift from the bridegroom.

She carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis, centered with a purple throat orchid.

Mrs. William Hughes of Arkadelphia was matron of honor. She wore a gown of lilac organdy over taffeta and carried an arm bouquet of Shasta daisies tied with green streamers.

MURDER LIQUIDATED

Copyright 1930 by The Associated Press. All Rights Reserved.

THE STORY: Sent to arrest V. G. McGregor, head of a bandit-ridden territory, a special investigator of the attorney general's office, learned that McGregor had been sending him anonymous gifts of four $1000 bills. Corbett suspects a political plot to frame his chief, Attorney General Keever, who expects to run for governor. Corbett goes to see Colonel Winton, insurance liquidator, and finds Sammy Berend, a shy lawyer, in Winton's office.

VII
COLONEL WINTON explained that Sammy Berend represented a large block of claims, $300,000 worth, to be exact, against McGregor's company.

Now, when a damage suit claim is filed in our state with the liquidator of an insurance company, a commission is appointed to investigate its merits. This is a formality, because the commission invariably accepts recommendations of the liquidator. I asked Winton if the commission had acted.

"Yes," answered Colonel Winton. "Mr. Berend's claims—I should say the claims of his clients, were allowed in full."

Sammy Berend had never in his life filed a damage suit for anything but its nuisance value. If Sammy sued for 10 cents, that meant he would take $500 in settlement. And he always sued for at least 10 cents. To allow his claims in full was preposterous. When I got my breath, I said:

"Well, at that rate, the claims against McGregor's company won't be paid off at more than 10 cents on the dollar, will they?"

Colonel Winton made a long face. "Young man, thanks to my efforts in collecting deficiency assessments from the policy holders, all claims will be paid off at the rate of 90 cents on the dollar!"

Again I was floored. Sammy's clients would collect $297,000 from the assets of McGregor's company. Rather, the clients would collect half of that, and Sammy would collect the other half, for he took all claims on a 50-50 basis. I stared hard at Colonel Winton, who maintained an air of proud achievement. I turned to Sammy Berend and smirked.

"No more questions," I said. I spoke to Sammy Berend. "You'll be glad to know that you've also put McGregor in jail in about an hour and a half I'm arresting him for a technical violation of the insurance code. I hope you're satisfied, you stinking little rat!"

Sammy Berend paled slightly, but made no move from his chair. I could have called him anything and failed to get a rise out of him. He never exerted himself unless he saw a fee in it. I turned on my heel and left the office.

I WALKED rapidly out of the Roland Building, then froze as I beheld the occupant in Sammy Berend's red convertible. Her hair was as fiery as the color of the car, and that was fiery indeed.

I had never seen the girl before and I'd never have missed her if she had been a native of Capital City. I had to admire Sammy Berend's taste, but the idea of a lovely creature like that sitting there and waiting for him was nauseating.

"Hello, Miss," Sammy told me to tell you he'd be down in a minute. I said:

She stared at me, her eyes narrowing with suspicion. She said nothing. I had to make her talk.

"I'm riding with you. Mind if I climb in front?"

She hesitated, then said: "Not at all. Sammy didn't mention your name."

I froze, then moved on swiftly around the front of the car and climbed in on the driver's side. She was the girl all right, the one who had phoned Keever that morning and told him about the $1000 bills. I'd listened to enough canned phone conversations never to be fooled by the changes recording and a telephone can make.

Miss Martha Helen Burns of Gulfport, Miss, was bridesmaid and was gowned in lilac green organdy over taffeta. Her arm bouquet was of Shasta daisies tied with lilac streamers.

Lawrence Hazzard, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers were Sammy Segnar of Lake Charles, La.; John Honea, Texarkana; Billy Mitchell and James Osborn, brother of the bride.

For her daughters wedding, Mrs. Osborn chose a navy blue silk shantung suit with navy blue accessories, and pink nylon gloves. Her flowers were a corsage of pink roses.

Mrs. Hazzard, mother of the bridegroom, wore a navy blue sheer with matching accessories, and a corsage of pink feathered carnations.

Mrs. J. M. Sims of Emmet, maternal grandmother of the bride, wore a navy and white printed sheer with white accessories, and a corsage of white carnations.

A reception was held in the banquet hall of the church after the ceremony. Greeting guests at the door was Mrs. H. E. Thrash. Mrs. Mirl Richards introduced them to the receiving line which included Mrs. Osborn, Mrs. Hazzard, the bride couple, Mrs. Hughes, and Miss Burns.

The Hall was beautifully decorated with baskets of white gladioli, stock, marconi daisies, and wood wardia. The brides table was covered with a white organdy floor length cloth with lace inserts. The three tiered wedding cake, embossed with white roses, was topped with miniature bride and groom, and encircled with feverfew and plumosus fern. Crystal containers filled with Ester Reid daisies, feverfew, plumosus fern, and white tapers were at each corner of the table.

Mrs. Miles Laha and Miss Nell Cooke of Biloxi, Miss. presided at the cake, and Miss Mary Ethel Perkins served the punch from a side table assisted by Miss Marilyn Danner of Iowa City, Iowa.

The brides book was in charge of Miss Helen Copeland of Nashville. Those assisting at the reception were: Mrs. Harry Shiver, Mrs. Othal Taylor, Mrs. Neil Osborn, Mrs. Dale F. Taylor of Smackover, Miss Louise Webb of Biloxi, Miss. and Mrs. A. D. Brannan.

Following the ceremony the couple left on a wedding trip after which they will be at home at 714 King's Highway, Shreveport, where the bride will be connected with the new VA hospital, and Mr. Hazzard will be employed as Pharmacist at Whitley's Pharmacy.

For traveling the bride chose an aqua Palm Beach suit with white linen accessories and she pinned the orchid from her bouquet at her shoulder.

Among the out of town guests were: Miss Nell Cooke and Miss Louise Webb of Biloxi, Miss. Marilyn Danner, Iowa City, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. William Hughes, Arkadelphia; Rev. and Mrs. Roy Vickers, Hot Springs; Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Kizka and Janis Delight, Miss Helen Copeland, Nashville, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Kemper, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Andrews, Mansfield, La. Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Hazzard, and Bertha Floe, Dewitt, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Stringer, and Christine and Ray, Waldo, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Warren, Magnolia, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Colfield and Randy, of Prescott.

Coming and Going
Miss Betty Allwhite of Dallas Texas arrived Friday night to spend

"Say, what's the idea? What are you doing?"
"I forgot. Sammy's to meet us at a spot down the street."

Her voice had become so loud that passer-by started. I drowned out her voice as I started the motor and made it roar. I shot the car away from the curb. The redhead was crying me as if I were a maniac. I grinned as I turned the convertible through traffic.

"Take it easy, sister. I'm the guy you tried to frame when you called Keever this morning, the guy who got four grand through the mail from the anonymous donor! Remember?"

SHE remembered. She paled slightly beneath her sun tan. She looked at me as if I were a member of the old Five Points Gang. But she didn't utter a peep. That suited me. I wanted her to think I was a very tough guy. I was an auto thief and a kidnaper—that ought to hold her!

"Where are you taking me?" Her voice sounded shaky.

"Where you're going to talk! Where you can explain why you phoned Keever and who put you up to it!"

I reached my apartment house in about 10 minutes. Just for effect I got out the automatic from its shoulder holster.

She got out and made no sound. She was evidently too badly frightened to remember her handbag, and I caught it up and carried it. I would be interested in the identification that handbag would contain.

I let her into my apartment. Miss Croft, sitting demurely at her desk out front and listening to a soap opera, would not have approved. Keever would not have approved. The police would not have approved.

"Sit down and take it easy," I told her. I dumped the handbag on a stand. I won't add to the cracks already made about contents of ladies' handbags, but I found what I was looking for. An Ohio driver's license. The girl was Wendy Hillyer, from Cleveland, and I knew enough about the town to know that she had a good address.

children in it? Do you think the action of this story, which is being set stone to you for the last of their love and respect?

Its had enough for a married man with children to fall in love with another woman when it is an act of God, so to speak, and he can't help himself. But for a man like you who isn't in love with a woman to go deliberately out to seek romance is simply hunting trouble.

Dear Miss Dix: I have a close relative who is being enticed by a widow with a house full of children. He had a misunderstanding with a lovely young girl to whom he was engaged, and now it is quite plain that the widow is trying to get him on the rebound. He will be a very miserable man if he marries her, for his life as well as that of the young lady will be ruined. What can I do toward keeping this man from making a fatal mistake?

Answer: Very little. When a family starts out to break off that match the general result is that they hurry it up.

You see, there is nothing like opposition to fan the flame of love, because it immediately makes the lover the champion of the poor, abused, woman or man who is so unjustly accused by others. In this case probably the man has secret doubts about the wisdom of marrying a woman with a ready-made family and of letting himself in for a lifetime of self-supporting another man's children.

But the minute you begin pointing out the disadvantages of the situation you make him the widow's advocate, and he will shut his eyes to the danger and think only of what a help he can be to the poor, weak little angel who needs a strong man to lean on and to help her rear her children.

You best play it to go after the old sweetheart and induce her to come to the rescue. Tell her this is no time for hurt pride wounded vanity. It is time for the life-saving the best of us. Which is right?

Answer: Both, because talking of different things speaking of the beauty of a woman's physical features are so filled with gentleness, but their beauty that raises you in any man's breast. (Released by The Hall)

DOROTHY DIX Tired of Wife

Dear Miss Dix: I was married at the age of 20 to a very beautiful girl and she is still beautiful. We have been married twenty years. There is no jealousy on either side, but we do not seem able to agree on anything. She assumes a dictatorial attitude about all of our plans or doings and, of course, I will not stand for it. I have tried time and again to be as loving as a man can, possibly be and things would be peaceful for a few days. Then words between us that would kill all the affection that had been rekindled. Now it has got to the place where she is repulsive to me. We have two fine children, 18 and 19, and I still think of their welfare, but it is hard to miss the romance that should continue through two weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Allwhite of Emmet.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Daniel of Oklahoma City are the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Brooks. They will conclude their vacation in Baton Rouge and New Orleans, Louisiana.

Kenneth Holland joined his wife the former Marjorie Dildy, Saturday. They are the guests of her mother, Mrs. L. K. Dildy.

Sammy Segnar who was an usher in the Osborn-Hazzard wedding, has returned to Lake Charles, Louisiana where he has accepted a position with the Cities Service Oil Co. of Lake Charles.

ADD COMM AND GO

GOVERNOR

Sid McMath

SPEAK IN THE NEW

LIVESTOCK

AT HOPE'S FAIR PARK

Cool . . . Indoors 6,000 Seats

LET'S RE-ELECT

Sid McMath

Come and hear Your Governor in the New Hundred Thousand Dollar Arena . . . Cool—Comfortable—Indoors—6000 Seats—

The program will begin at 7:30 with a Band Concert, followed by announcements by State, District and County Candidates.

This will be the Governor's major address in Southwest Arkansas and delegations are coming from all surrounding counties.

Sid McMath will reveal in certain terms what his opponent "Did Before" and prove that "He Will Do It Again." The issues of this campaign will be frankly and fearlessly discussed.
